You should not rely in any way on the service being available; no liability is accepted for its non-availability.

Use of the message board is at your own risk. Any material/data downloaded from the site is at your own risk, you are solely responsible for any damage to your computer or any loss of data resulting from such download.

Whilst access to the website and message board is offered as standard to all Members, there is no automatic right to use them, and Members may be suspended from them at any time, subject to the procedures defined in the Club constitution.

Norton Owners Club – Forum Policy

Forum content

With the exception of the 'Off Topic' board, material posted must be relevant to the board it is posted on. We reserve the right to:

- Move content to a more applicable board
- Edit content to correct inaccuracies
- Delete inappropriate postings

We would encourage you to be polite and reasonable when posting. Postings must not contain matter that is false, defamatory, libellous, intentionally inaccurate, illegal, abusive, harmful, vulgar, hateful, harassing, obscene, profane, threatening, overtly offensive, invasive of a person's privacy, or otherwise objectionable. Such material may be removed without notice.

The EC can be held legally liable for forum content; accordingly content that may leave the EC/Club open to legal action will be removed without notice.

Viruses: Do not post any material containing viruses, or any other software intended to disrupt the Clubs computer, or anyone else's.

Advertising: Advertising is forbidden on the forums. Any advertising posted will be removed without notice.

We would advise you not to post personal information about yourself – the majority of the forums are open to the general public and we have no control over who views them. If you wish to contact another Member, clicking on their name above a post will take you to a form where you can send them a private message.
